Puzzles a thrill for maths whizz

Love for numbers runs in the family for Singapore boy who topped international contest

Maths Whizz

The obsession with mind-bending conundrums came early.

A favourite childhood activity for Singaporean student Liu Jack, who won the International Mathematics Olympiad last week, was to create puzzles for others to solve.

Jack took a great liking to solving the brain-teasing puzzles, ranging from squiggly lines to the three-dimensional.

Now 17, his interest in puzzles and conundrums, which is his favourite maths topic, grew and continued, which led to the study of permutations and combinations and formalised in the last two years, one through a logic and problem-solving skills. His love for navigating spatial and logical challenges led to a prize win at the end of the Olympiad last week, after a gruelling two-month quest.

It is the first Singaporean to do so. In the process, the National University of Singapore (NUS) High School student obtained a perfect score, also a first for a Singaporean, and the only one in his field's career, which attracts the brightest young mathematical minds from around the globe.

But he is not alone. He is among the competitors at the next year's Olympiad, which will be the last one held for as he is also to graduate from NUS High School this year.

Cheng, 51. She said his As came in maths, physics, chemistry and computing, but he gets his real excitement from languages.

Jack, however, is serious in person, and it was his older sister, Min, who revealed that his other hobbies are reading and watching anime, and solving logic puzzles.

It's a cinch
"He doesn't study too hard but somehow manages to do well."

LIU JACK'S FATHER, Mr. LIU BING, 51, said his son Liu Jack, 17, is a 13-year-old Singaporean who has become the first Singaporean to top the International Mathematical Olympiad in Singapore.

He was never indulging in a child. Asked who he would credit for developing his talent in math, he pointed out his family. "Without their guidance and support, I wouldn't have come so far," Liu says.

His father, Mr. Liu, who is on 11-2 at Kallias Road, and Li, 55, in Serangoon, are both also mathematically inclined. The father was a teacher at local math competitions, and the mother represented Singapore at the China Girls' Math Olympiad last year.

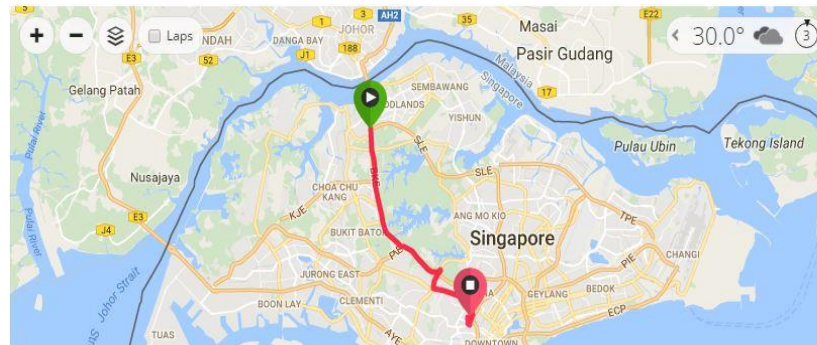

But like many boys his age, Jack's mind these days is not so much on math as the online game Minecraft.

The multi-player game allows players to build structures, and Jack exploits the game's lack of limits to create complex puzzles for his friends to decipher out of.

In fact, playing Minecraft was so fun that Jack quit when he arrived home from Argentina on Wednesday.

While he has yet to decide where and when to study at university, one thing has not changed from when he was a little boy. He said he "used to like to make maths, as well as computing, his career."
